Difficulty in Securing Them for the Government.

Evolution in Naval Construction Renders Capable Men Desirable. Chief Examiner Serven, of the Civil Service Commission, Goes to Newport News in Regard to the Matter.

"The Commission is experiencing great difficulty in getting eligibles for the positions of ship draftsman and assistant ship draftsman. The evolution of naval construction and the countless questions of mechanics and design involved in these examinations make them perhaps the most difficult in our schedule. Naval construction, a thorough knowledge of which is required by the draftsman, is perpetually developing new features, each one involving considerable study on the part of the designer and constructor. We endeavor to reach the proper class of applicants through the scientific journals of the country, as well as by notices in the public press, but the Commission will perhaps be compelled to adopt another method for securing applicants.

"Mr. Serven has formulated an excellent plan, which is to secure a list of specially qualified persons, who, by reason of their known scientific attainments, may be supknown scientific attainments, may be supposed to be fitted for such technical positions. These persons, upon signifying their willingness to accept such positions under the Government, will be placed at once upon the list and will be called upon at the date of the examination. In this way our list of applicants would be made up before the scheduled date of the examination and no time would be lost.

"Many of the private shipbuilding firms in the country offer much higher salaries to their designers than is paid by the Government for like positions, and we naturally lose many valuable men because of this.

Chief Examiner A. R. Serven, of the Civil Service Commission, left this city last night for Newport News, Va., for the purpose of consulting J. J. Woodward, naval constructor, as to the most advisable form of questions to be used by the Civil Service Commission in the forthcoming examinations for ship draftsmen and assistant ship draftsmen.

It is understood that these examinations will be postponed from April 17 until June in order to formulate the questions and to give ample time for securing a sufficient number of applicants.

George R. Wales, Assistant Examiner, ho acts in place of Mr. Serven during the latter's absence, said today:

"The Commission is experiencing great of the Civil Service Commission is experiencing great of the stability of the heuses to the heuse is a means of kepping out dampness. He thinks there would be no danger as to the stability of the heuses so built, but he is also of the opinion that the precedent that may be established by the use of such walls is a matter requiring a good deal of care and consideration.

Mr. Brady points out a number of objections to such constructions, one of which is the possibility of fires. In case of a conflagration, he says, when the roof and floors should be burned away, concrete walls would fall en masse, and would pot buckle and collapse as brick or masonry walls of the city than walls of hereby causing a far greater radius of destruction fo surrounding properations of the concrete would present a very serious problem.

Edward F. Roome, employed as a runner by the American Savings Bank, at 1007 G Street northwest, was this morning the victim of a bold daylight robbery. While in the Traders' National Bank at the cor-ner of Tenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, he was relieved of a pocketbook containing $142 in cash and checks and drafts to the amount of $400. The robbery was discovered immediately, but the thief was discovered ininculately, but the tilest escaped. The police are now at work on the case without a clew. According to the story told the police by Roome he left the American Savings Bank on his usual morning run about 2.52 o'clock. He visited several banks where checks were cashed, stopped at the City Postoffice where money orders were redeemed, and finally made his way to the Traders National Bank about 10:35 clock o'clock.

There he drew a check from the large pocketbook and presented it for payment, returning the pocketbook to an outside pocket of his overcoat and holding it with his hand. While waiting for the payment on the check Roome drew a piece of tobactor from his pocket, the same which held. or from his pocket, the same which held the pocketbook and when the tobacco was returned to the pocket the pocketbook and contents were gone.
